AN OLD LANDMARK.

Dr. William D. Jennings, Sr., died on Saturday last, the 9th day of January, at the residence of his life-long friend and kinsman, John R. Blackwell. On Monday his remains were brought to our town and laid to rest by the side of his wife and oldest son, "Old Doctor Bill," as generally called, was one of our ancient landmarks, as widely known in Edgefield county, perhaps, as any man living or dead. For more than seventy-seven years he has been going in and out among us, and for only a short period of this long life was he absent from his beloved old county and people. (Immediately after the war he lived in Galveston, Texas where he was a member of the faculty of a medical college in that city.) Dr. Jennings was noted above all things for his genial disposition; he "showed himself friendly" to all, and in affliction or distress was unremitting in his ministrations. A kinder hearted man or physician never lived, if we may judge by his acts. And if all in Edgefield county who have received kindnesses at his hands would bring a wreath for his grave it would make a monument higher than any other in our city of the dead.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The days are growing perceptibly longer.

Last Sunday was an Indian summer day, almost.

A marriage or two about the 1st of February in Edgefield.

Miss Kellah Fair, Mr. Nick Brunson and Mr. J. W. Peak are all ill with the grip.

Some of our merchants are already getting in onion sets, peas, beans and other garden seeds.

We regret to hear of the illness of little Annie the daughter of Mr. D. B. Hollingsworth.

Wanted—Fifty bushels of corn in the ear (will buy a less quantity). Apply at the Advertiser office.

The vertical style of handwriting is being introduced in the New York schools, and is one of the latest fads.

Mr. J. M. Eaves, former railroad agent at this place, died at his home, Bamberg, S. C., on Sunday morning last of pneumonia.

Miss Gell Richards is in Edgefield with the intention of spending the balance of the winter. Her many friends here rejoice to see her.

Married, by the Rev. Thomas Seago, at the home of the bride's father in Edgefield county, Dec. 23rd, 1896, Mr. George Snow and Miss Lina Dorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Holstein, of Batesburg, have removed to Edgefield and are living with their daughter Mrs. M. A. Taylor—quite an acquisition to our society.

Rev. N. N. Burton, a native and former preacher of this county, has been called to preach at McCall, Marlboro county. That will be his place of abode after February 1st.

The Baptist Courier of last week acknowledges the receipt of the following funds from the Edgefield Association: Union meeting, third division, $4.61; Bethany, $5.74; Antioch, $0.72; total, $11.07.

Dr. T. E. Jennings, of Modoc, who has been quite sick for the past two weeks with pneumonia, and whose life was despaired of at one time, is, we are glad to state, on the road to recovery.

The Piedmont Headlight says that the rumblings around Ninety-Six are simply solemn protests from that section of old Abbeville county against being dismembered and cut off into Greenwood county.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Edgefield Bank our young friend Horde Allen was elected assistant cashier, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. J. L. Mims. A better man for the place could not be found. The mantle has fallen on the right man.

Col. W. H. Folk has bought the coffin factory that was located near the depot, has torn it down and will erect a building therefrom in Buncombe, devoted to less mournful uses. We commend the Colonel's pluck in destroying so gruesome a reminder that we are passing away.

Mr. Farris J. Boatwright, well known in Edgefield, has removed from Darlington, where he has for several years conducted a large mercantile business, and is now at Monetta, near Ridge Spring, where he will take charge of the business of his father, the late Capt. James Boatwright.

Mr. W. N. Harling, the new assistant of Clerk J. B. Hill, is son of the late Lemuel Harling, of Log Creek, and a grandson of Holloway Clegg, of Kirksey. Our young friend married a daughter of Jas. T. Outts, of Elmwood. With such blood in his veins and such environments could he be other than what he is, namely, upright, honest—a tripartite combination of blood, brawn and brains?

Edgefield at S. C. College.

The honor roll of the South Carolina College we note among students of Edgefield county who distinguish themselves at the December session the following: In senior class, G. Hughes, distinguished in philosophy and history; proficient in political economy, logic, history of philosophy and geology; sophomore, G. H. Bunch, proficient in Latin, Greek and history; J. E. Swearingen, distinguished in Latin, German, English, history and mathematics, distinguished in French.

State Grab Bag.

Under the pension law of last year the county pension boards are required to meet at their respective court houses on the third Monday in January, 1897, to pass upon applications for pensions. No notice has been given us by the Edgefield county board, but we are telling it to you according to law. Now, last year, not more than half the men in our noble old county, and two-thirds of the widowed women, applied for pensions. This year, come! Not as single spies, but in battalions! All make a grab at the big grab bag!

I now have on hand fifty tons Acid, Kanit and Guano and am prepared for business. Mail while the roads are good. E. J. NORRIS, Agent Patapasco Guano Co., Baltimore and Columbia Phos. Co.

A Card of Thanks.

To the good people of Edgefield I wish to return my sincere thanks for the generous assistance rendered me after my recent loss. I do not know individually the contributors, hence I take this method of thanking all, but especially would I mention Misses Sudie Davis and Kate Samuel. Their help and sympathy will be most gratefully remembered. And to the neighbors both white and colored, who came to my rescue on the day of the fire, I also return unbounded thanks.

A NIGGER FROLIC

At Tompkins' Cross Roads at Which Half a Dozen People are Shot—Time to Call a Halt.

MR. EDITOR: One night during Christmas week on Tompkins' cross roads place, Lark B. Coker had a hot supper, and during the first part of the night everything went off smoothly, not the least ripple to mar any one's pleasure. The violinist was grinding out the sweetest of music. Oh, how it did delight the ear, and young ladies and gents skipped about the floor in French dancing master style. But all of a sudden the dimer began to fly around to pay the violinist, and some one of the party raised a fuss about 10 cents. The lights were blown out as quick as a flash of lightning and then pop, pop went the pistols like a pack of fire crackers, and when the smoke cleared away four persons were found wounded.

Mr. John Timmerman, superintendent of the plantation, who was there to keep the darkies from burning his fence, was coming out of the door and had had no fuss with any one, was seriously shot in the abdomen, though not considered dangerous, and one colored man's knee was badly shattered. Two other colored men were slightly wounded.

Almost every negro man and boy carries pistols, and I heard some of them talking one day about shooting some one they had fallen out with, just as if they were going out some where to shoot a dog and would be no more harm. Our legislature should make an office to have an officer looking all the time for pistol carriers.

Those who did the shooting at Blocker's supper ought to be tied and severely punished for shooting into the whole crowd. There is too much frolicking, shooting and gambling among the people and not enough work which seems to be a secondary matter. Land owners ought to put a stop to these hot supper frolics in the interest of peace and prosperity, and get the people to work, as a thing much will be done as long as these frolics are going on.

During the Christmas of 1895 near this place, there was a good colored man shot and killed, and the thing will continue to go on until the white folks take some steps to put it down, and the sooner the better. Such labor and farming carried on in the way it now carried on by the land owners, is a disgrace and a perpetual drawback to the prosperity of our country.

JOHNSON'S REMINISCENCES

His Estimate of Some of the Preachers of the Edgefield Association.

Bro. Samuel Cartledge, or rather Father Cartledge, as he was called by the brethren in the latter days of his life, when I became acquainted with him, was one of the most useful Baptist preachers in the District of Edgefield. He was a hard working man, and though destitute of the advantages of education, God was pleased to make him a preacher of the gospel of his Son. At the time of his removal into the district preachers of the gospel were few. He was therefore cordially received. It was so ordered in divine providence that soon after his removal five persons became sick, and were thought to be dangerous, and finally hopeless. Father Cartledge was sent for, and made prayer to God for their restoration to health. His prayer was answered and they all recovered. This gave the people great confidence in him as favored of God. They therefore went out in considerable numbers to hear him preach, and his labors being much blessed many were converted to God and baptized and formed into churches. His manner of preaching was plain, and the positions he took were illustrated and sustained by anecdotes which though sometimes amusing, were useful in making the truth better understood by the larger class of his hearers who like himself, were without education. His gift in prayer was remarkable for its simplicity. It was like the little child pleading with his father for some favor upon which his heart is set in tones submissive and yet with an earnestness that can take no denial. To his plainness of speech and true spirit of prayer with which God had blessed this honored servant is attributable the success of his labors. He lived to a good old age loved and respected by all who knew him.

I have before stated that the Convention had removed their Institution to a more central part of the State. This was in Sumter district near the High Hills of Santee, where Rev. Dr. Jesse Hartwell resided, and under his care a tuition the students were placed in his own house. Bro. Hartwell was possessed of an imperturbable disposition which, as I was told by one of the students, they never saw ruffled. He was affectionate and warm hearted, zealous in the cause of his Master, weeping over sinners and rejoicing over them when brought to the saving knowledge of the truth; acquainted with the Hebrew, Greek and Latin languages together with the usual branches of learning taught in our colleges he was a teacher of most desirable qualities and attainments. The instruction and example of such a man was of great value to the students. When the manual labor system was added to the institution, and it was removed to another location, Bro. Hartwell removed to the West and became the president of a college near the Red River in the State of Missouri, where he ended his useful life, esteemed and loved by all who were acquainted with him.

Rev. Jonathan Davis entered the ministry at a period of life somewhat advanced without the advantages of a collegiate or theological course of study. But having a good, practical mind and being possessed of an ample fortune, he gave himself very much to the ministry and was useful. Of his abundant means, he was liberal to institutions of religion, benevolence and learning. At the time of his becoming a member of Baptist Convention manual labor schools were regarded by many as necessary to the education of boys and young men. Bro. Davis being an industrious and practical man was their zealous advocate. Other members of the Convention thought favorably of them also. And upon the offer of Bro. Davis to canvass his own district and the one next to it for the requisite sum, it was agreed, if he was successful, to add the manual labor system to the institution. The subscription was opened and Bro. Davis headed it with $1,000, and set out in due time with a willing mind and strong faith upon the noble enterprise. He preached as he went, presenting the object of agency on all proper occasions to the attention of the people, and God was pleased to bless his labors in his preaching and his agency. Souls were saved, and the amount required was raised. A farm was bought and the implements of husbandry provided, and the students at proper intervals of study went to work, and things went on promising for a time. But a sad disaster befell the enterprise. Our principal building was destroyed by fire, involving the principal in a severe loss and the students in losses of less amounts. Upon mature deliberation the manual labor system was discontinued.

After some years Bro. Davis was afflicted by the loss of his property. He nevertheless continued his labors in the ministry, and became a domestic missionary, notwithstanding a lameness received before which obliged him to use crutches. I visited him in his last illness and very much regretted to find him so feeble that, in his efforts to speak, he could not be understood. But bringing his hands together in a devotional manner I saw his lips move as he lifted his eyes upward, and I doubt not that his Father in heaven understood and comforted his dear servant, who died the next day. It was my mournful privilege to perform the funeral rites of this dear brother whom I loved with warm and tender affection.

Winthrop College.

We clip the following interesting data regarding Winthrop College from correspondence in Columbia Register:

The annual meeting of Board of Trustees was held last Friday evening. President Johnson presented the report of last year's work and the annual report to the Legislature was made up from it. From the report and from all facts brought out, last year was a most prosperous one. All financial estimates as to the expenses of the students made in the prospectus before the opening of the school, and also the appropriations made by the General Assembly, have been kept intact. Good board has been furnished, use of rooms, light, heat and washing for $8.50 per month. As the result of the satisfactory work of the first session, there has been a most auspicious beginning of the second. The attendance has been greater than the whole of last session, and would have been larger if there had been room in the dormitory for more students. Of the 800 who applied for admittance during the summer, 403 have been enrolled, of which number only 240 can be accommodated in the present dormitory. With comparatively small expenditure for additional dormitory accommodations, the college could be made doubly effective and could benefit almost twice as many girls. The foundations of another dormitory of the same construction as the present one have been laid brick and a large amount of stone left over from the other building are now on the grounds.

The report of the Board of Trustees, it was found the States of Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, and every county in the State of South Carolina are represented. The average age of the girls is 18 years and three months.

Much valuable work has been done on the farm during the past year. It has been much improved by terracing, ditching and draining. An orchard of more than 800 fruit trees, early and late varieties, has been planted, and preparations have been made for raising many of the smaller fruits. The crop have been good. A large quantity of oats and 1,200 bushels of corn have been harvested.

The college grounds have been much improved. Walks and macadamized drives have been laid out, and a neat iron fence placed around the grounds.

The Alumnae Association was increased last year by the addition of the twenty-two graduates of 1896, thus making in earnest, devoted and women who have gone teachers in the State.

The college building equipments were placed on the disposal of the teachers of the year, and over 100 of the teachers of the State were accommodated.

The religious life of the institution is carefully guarded. Attendance upon their own churches or to the churches to which their parents or guardians belong, is required every Sunday, except in case of sickness. President Johnson has arranged with the ministers of Rock Hill to preach regularly in the college chapel on Sunday nights thus providing for every Sunday in the month. Attendance upon Sunday school is encouraged. The Young Women's Christian Association, organized in Columbia last year, exerts strong influence upon the religious life and a band of 100 earnest and loyal young women are now making their influence for good felt throughout the institution.

There has been no trouble or friction in the discipline of the school since its organization. The whole plan of government is conceived and executed with the view of making the college a pleasant, busy and therefore well-ordered, home. The object is to develop self control, high character, and a desire to do the right because it is right. A fine spirit of earnestness and loyalty pervades the whole student body. The girls as a rule are painstaking and careful in all their duties.

To meet the needs of enlarged work, the faculty has been increased by the addition of four instructors to teach modern languages, reading and elocution, physiology and hygiene, mathematics and English.

I now have a first-class Meat Market and always have what you want. Call and see me. G. W. CAMPBELL.
